Price List 2027 Usa von Stietencron

For everyone on a middle income, I have not raised my prices since November 2025 - despite inflation of at least 5% (October '25 to December '26). With this price list, however, I am taking a step that matters to me: I am introducing (roughly 10% higher) prices for people in financially strong circumstances.

I have concrete ideas about who - in my view - belongs to which group. To find out, you can ask yourself the following questions:

- Have I inherited € 200,000 or more?
- Do I own instruments, bows, apartments, or other assets worth more than € 700,000?
- Do I, or my family, have a private total annual income of more than € 100,000?
- Do I benefit financially from the favourable loan (e.g. with insurance and maintenance paid by the owner) of an instrument or bow?

If you can answer 'yes' to any of these questions, I ask you to pay the 'financially strong price' (about 10% above the standard prices).

Furthermore, you can ask yourself these questions:

- Have the people around me and/or I experienced violence, directly or indirectly (physical and emotional violence, colonialism, discrimination, war, and all other forms of violence), and do we face financial challenges today?
- After paying rent and expenses for physical and mental health, am I left with less than € 500 per month, or € 400 per household member?

If you can answer "yes" to any of these questions, I ask you to pay the reduced price (about 15% below the standard prices). The list is certainly not exhaustive; you may have other reasons for paying less. Another question could be:

- Does paying the reduced price instead of the standard price make an substantial difference for me today?

I would also like to point out that other prices can be agreed upon as well. Of course, any price between the lowest and the highest are an option. And very small contributions are possible too - we have a donation box for that! Almost all tips (for consultations, small jobs, satisfaction with advice, unusual working hours in emergencies…) have been going into the donation box for years. Note: it is easier to collect donations than to find people who will make use of them. Being short of money is still burdened with a great deal of shame and taboo in our society. So, please dare to mention your situation, and encourage the people you talk to to make use of the money that has been collected!

What matters to me:

- You know your situation, you decide which price to pay. Trust and honesty are the basis of our collaboration.
- Depending on your current situation, you can choose a different price on each visit to the workshop.

Why do I choose this more complex way of determining your price for our work? With my needs-based prices (while the quality of our work remains consistently high), I want to contribute to preventing the financial circumstances of my customers from drifting further apart. And I want to enable our workshop to work for everyone - regardless of how well-off they are. Our work is about your music! If we are allowed to care for your instrument and doing so does not push you into financial hardship, then we have the opportunity to contribute to your music. And that is what we love to do!

Note: I am working on the translation of the work descriptions - for now it's in German
